

ABSTRACT

A system for presenting scenes selected from image signals generated by a camera having a 360° field of view. An array of transmitters, is located in the field of view. When a sound originates from a region close to any one of the transmitters, the transmitter is actuated to transmit an address signal to a receiver located with the camera. The camera is equipped to select for presentation the scene corresponding to the transmitted address.